5.4 EMAIL

5.4.1 What is an E-mail ?

- Electronic mail (email or e-mail) is a method of exchanging messages ("mail") between people using specially designed computer networks. Due to its high speed, low cost, and efficiency, e-mail is today one of the most important channels of communication.
- Like business letters and memos, e-mail messages help to reinforce professional and business relations.
- Everyday business dealings and ordinary activities of business would not be possible without e-mail. E-mail can be used both as a means to reach out to people outside an organisation, and to send information within an organisation.
- We need effective e-mail writing skills because e-mail can be an important communications channel in professional corporate life.

5.4.2 How to write Effective Emails ?

GQ. What are the basic rules to be followed during email writing?

The average office worker receives around 80 emails each day. With that volume of mail, individual messages can easily get overlooked. Follow these simple rules to get your emails noticed and acted upon.

1. Don't Overcommunicate by Email

- One of the biggest sources of stress at work is the sheer volume of emails that people receive. So, before you begin writing an email, ask yourself: "Is this really necessary?"
- Also, email is not as secure as you might want it to be. So avoid sharing sensitive or personal information in an email,.

2. Make Good Use of Subject Lines

- A blank subject line is more likely to be overlooked or rejected as "spam," so always use a few well-chosen words to tell the recipient what the email is about.
- A well-written subject line delivers the most important information, without the recipient even having to open the email.

3. Keep Messages Clear and Brief

- Emails need to be clear and concise. Keep your sentences short and to the point.
- The body of the email should be direct and informative, and it should contain all pertinent information.

4. Be Polite

The messages you send are a reflection of your own professionalism, values, and attention to detail, so a certain level of formality is needed.

- Avoid informal language, slang, jargon, and inappropriate abbreviations, emoticons.
- Close your message with "Regards," "Yours sincerely," or "All the best," etc.

5. Check the Tone

- Your choice of words, sentence length, punctuation, and capitalization can easily be misinterpreted without visual and auditory cues.
- Think about how your email "feels" emotionally. If your intentions or emotions could be misunderstood, find a less ambiguous way to phrase your words.

6. Proofreading

Finally, before you hit "send," take a moment to review your email for spelling, grammar, and punctuation mistakes.

7. Do not attach unnecessary files.
8. Do not write in capital letters.
9. Keep your language gender neutral.
10. Don't send /forward emails containing offensive, racist or defamatory remarks.

5.4.3 Explain the Structure of an Email

There is a standard structure for emails. Email contents are primarily classified as two, the header and the body. We are going to see the contents come under the two subparts.

1. The Header

The email header gives us common details about the message such as the unique identity of the message. The details of the users of the 'from' and 'to' ends are also stored here. The email header consists of the following parts. However, the exact contents of the header can vary according to the email systems that generate the email message.

- Subject
- Sender (From :)
- Date and time received (On)
- Reply-to
- Recipient (To :)
- Recipient email address
- Body
- Attachments

2. Subject

The subject part is the topic of the message. In most email systems, if the content view of the folders is set to view each messages separately, the subject part also will be visible with the user's name. These subject fields are scanned by the spam scanners to evaluate the messages.

3. Sender (From :)

This field describes the 'from' address of the email. This will specify the sender's email address. Usually, it will be the "reply-to" address.

4. Date and time received (On)

This is the date and time the message received.

5. Reply-to

This field describes the email address that will become the recipient of the reply to the particular email. When you reply, it will go to this email address despite the sender email address.

6. Recipient (To :)

This is the first/last name of the email recipient as configured by the sender.

7. Recipient email address

The email address of the recipient is specified here.

8. Body

The actual content is stored in this part. This will be in the format of text. This field could also include signatures or text generated automatically by the sender's email system. As we mentioned earlier, the contents of the emails can be varied according to the different email systems used by each user.

9. Attachments

Some emails could be attached with files such as text, image, audio, video etc. These files are specified here.

5.4.4 Sample E-mails

1. Welcome email

A welcome email is an opportunity to nurture newly formed relationships with your subscribers. It will serve as an introduction to your brand and let your readers know what you are all about. It will also introduce the reader to your tone of voice and set the standards for future communication.

☑ Ans. :

Hello [name]!

Welcome to [brand name]. We are happy to have you join our community.

[Brand name] goal is to create [add goal and/or mission of your brand].

We promise to only send you emails [add how many times per week you will be sending an email].

All emails will offer valuable information to help you along your journey and we may occasionally recommend a product that we believe in.

We hope you enjoy your time with us and, in the meantime, feel free to check our [educational resources of your brand]

Yours,
[Brand name]

Unit 5

2. Follow up email – for sales email

On many occasions, the first sales email you send out will get ignored, unnoticed or forgotten. In this case, a follow-up email is the best thing you can do to increase your chances of success. You can adjust this follow up email template to your needs.

☑ Ans. :

Dear [Name],

You are probably very busy, I totally understand that!

I'm writing to follow up on my latest email. I still haven't heard back from you and was wondering if you have had the time to consider my proposal.

It would be great to hear back from you. So, please let me know when you ind some time.

Regards,
[Your name]

3. Confirmation email

A confirmation email acts as an assurance to your customer that their order is being processed. It is sent right after you receive a customer's order to let them know that everything worked like a charm. To give a little extra, you could add an additional offer. Adjust the following confirmation email template to your needs.

☑ Ans:

Hi [Name],

Thanks for shopping with us. We've received your order and we are already getting started on it.

Once everything is ready to ship and confirmed, we will let you know. You will receive tracking information and other details within the next email.

To show our appreciation you will receive Free Shipping on your next order. All you have to do is enter Promo Code [enter promo code] at your next checkout!

See you soon!

4. Shipping confirmation email

A shipping confirmation email follows right after the confirmation email is sent. Once your customer is assured that their order is good to go, they will also want to know when exactly their goods will arrive. Send out a shipping confirmation email to let your customers know when to expect their delivery.

In it, you can also give extra details like a tracking number to make this more convenient. You can adjust the following shipping confirmation email template to your needs.

☑ Ans:

Hi [Name],

Your [product name] is on its way!

You can expect it to arrive at your shipping address within [Time frame].

The order number is [Order number].

Track your order's status here [Insert tracking info].

Thank you for shopping with us!

5. Invoice email

An invoice email is sent to make the payment process as convenient as possible. Briefly inform the recipient about the nature of the email before including a direct payment link that he can click on to complete his payment. And of course, don't forget to attach the invoice itself. You can use the following invoice email template and adjust it to your needs.

☑ Ans:

Hi [Name],

Here is the invoice for the [industry] services we provided for the period of [date] until [date].

You can easily make the payment by clicking here [Payment link].

You can use the following link to download a copy of your invoice in CSV or PDF: [insert link]

If you have any questions feel free to reach out.

Thank you for your trust,
[Company name]

6. Review email

Getting people to share their positive experience with your business plays an essential role in your brand's reputation. A review email's goal is to help you get more reviews for your products and brand in general. With this one, timing is of the essence – wait too long before sending it and your readers may no longer remember their experience vividly. Send it out too quickly, and your customers won't have enough info to use for their judgment. You can use the following review email template and adjust it to your needs.

☑ Ans. :

[Name],

You recently purchased [product] from [Your company].

We hope that you are enjoying it as much as we do! In fact, we'd like your honest opinion!

Your insights could help many other customers decide whether our products are worth buying.

Therefore, if you have 5 minutes to spare, please leave your review on [Product/service].

[Link to reviews]

Thank you!

7. Survey email – formal version

A survey is a great way to learn what your customers think. It includes a set of questions designed to collect many responses and get lots of quantitative data. You can use the following survey email template for formal occasions and adjust it to your needs.

☑ Ans:

Hello [Name],

We hope that you enjoy our [Product/service]!

Our company is always looking to improve our services. As such, would appreciate if you could give us [Amount of time] of your time to fill out the following survey.

[Link or CTA to survey]

Your answer will be used to help us improve our products and services.

Many thanks,
[Company name]

8. Survey email – informal version

On the other hand, your (personal) brand may have established a more informal tone of voice. In such cases, an informal email template will be more fitting. You can use the following template for such occasions:

☑ Ans. :

Hello [Name],

As you know, we love to get feedback. After all, a strong relationship is based on good communication.

For that reason, we would be super happy if you could fill in our survey!

It will only take 5 minutes… Promise!

[Link or CTA to survey]

Cheers,

[Company name]

9. Customer satisfaction email – open-ended questions.

A customer satisfaction email is different from the survey email due to the nature of the information you receive. In here, you will not send a survey. Instead, you will ask an open-ended question. As such, you will likely receive fewer results with higher qualitative value. You can use the following customer satisfaction survey email template and adjust it to your needs.

☑ Ans. :

Hi [Name],

Thanks for choosing us! We are always looking to improve our [Products/services].

For this reason, we'd like to ask you a question:

What do you think we could do to improve our services?

Hit that reply button and let us know!

Regards,
[Company's name]

10. Customer service email for dissatisfied customers

Once you receive a complaint, it is best to act fast. It is a good idea to have a canned response when such situations arise and send it out as soon as an issue arises. You can use the following customer service email template and adjust it to the specific complaint.

☑ Ans:

Hi [Name],

We are sorry to hear that you experienced [Customer complaint].

Our team is already sorting out [Customer issue]. In the meantime, feel free to let us know your suggestions for improvement.

We will update you within the next [time frame].

We appreciate the heads up.

Best,
[Your name]

11. Meeting invitation email– for business

You can send out a meeting invitation email to inform potential attendees about all the upcoming details. Include a location, date, and time to make sure that everybody knows what to expect. You can also add a meeting agenda to increase your chances of having a more productive meeting. Use the following meeting invitation email template and adjust it to your needs.

☑ Ans. :

Hi [Name],

In order to discuss [Meeting's purpose] and to [Other meeting objectives], a meeting has been scheduled.

I am looking forward to seeing you at [Location], at [Time] on [Date].

Below you will find the agenda for our meeting:

[Meeting agenda]

If you cannot confirm your attendance or you have any uncertainties, please let me know.

Have a nice day!

12. Thank you email

You can send a thank you email for almost any occasion. This email's goal is to show the recipient your appreciation of their efforts and help you build a stronger relationship. You can use the following template and adjust it to your needs.

☑ Ans. :

Hi [Name],

I just wanted to thank you once again for [Action]. This helped me a lot with [Problem].

I will keep you posted and, of course, let me if there is anything you need help with.

Sincerely,
[Your name]

5.8 JOB APPLICATION LETTERS

GQ. Write a short note on job application letters.

(4 Marks)

The job application letter is as good as a sales letter. A sales letter talks about the good qualities of the product. The applicant should try to show how good he can be for the company. Infact he should try to influence the employer by stating his good qualities of his which would convince him that he is the best candidate available around.

For this the applicant has to sell his services and talent. Applicant should draft a letter to attract attention, arouse Interest, create Desire and prompt Action. This is known as AIDA Formula.

Attention can best be attracted by emphasizing the services that the applicant can render. Here 'You attitude' comes handy.

Interest can be aroused by giving the prospective employer a proof of your merits. It is important to be truthful. The certificates and testimonials should be sent along with the application.

Interest can be created if the facts are attractively and interestingly presented and if it carries sufficient conviction.

Action is prompted in the form of a call for an interview. Applicant should suggest that such an interview should be at the convenience of the prospective employer and that it is certain to prove rewarding for both the parties.

These are two types of application letters :

(1) Response towards the advertisement

(2) Own initiative.

There are two ways of writing a letter of application for a job.

One is writing the personal details along with the application and another is writing a covering letter along with personal details i.e. Bio-data. The example for the first type.

GQ. You have recently seen an advertisement for an Executive Engineer in the 'Times of India' posted by an MNC. The company is looking for fresh Electrical Engineers with good academic record. Write an application to apply for the said job. (6 Marks)
